Immediately upo receipt of the news of Colonel Machin' death and defeat of the cavairy squadron under his command, in an encounter with the insurgents under Colonel Bonaches, General Campos left Havana for Sancti Spiritus the scene of the disaster. His object wa twofold-to organize an active pursuit of th Jas. W. Gaff, revolutionary leader, and to make one mor fort to open communication with him an uce him to accept the terms of the Tanon capitulation. In a speech that General ampos delivered to a liberal committee at came to welcome him, he is reporte to have eard: "I am come among you t earn the actual requirements of this coun try for reconstruction, so as to supply then without less of time and likewise to tell these parties wandering throughout the country who by their acts of vandalism have place themselves beyond the pale of the law, that they are yet in time, and if willing to com my terms, a full pardon awaits them, but if reckles-ly defiant, extermination await them, for the accomplishment of which have sufficient means at my disposal."
